Masonry Construction: Principles of Cleaning & Protecting Historic & New Construction
Construction Industry Training Council of Colorado

646 Mariposa St.

Denver, CO 80204

12:00pm- 1:30pm

This presentation is intended to provide the principles of cleaning and protecting new and historic masonry construction. When planning a cleaning campaign, people often select a product according to the staining or soiling on the building. While this process is correct in part, this practice does not include consideration of the substrate that is being cleaned and often leads to the selection of an inappropriate product. This, in conjunction with the marketing misnomers of "green clean" or "one cleaner for everything" can result in catastrophic, irreparable damage to your historic masonry. During this session, you will learn how to identify your substrate, discuss typical staining and soiling mechanisms, and learn the protocols for cleaning and protecting masonry. Participants will learn procedures to develop their cleaning campaign and plan for continued maintenance of their masonry construction.

Key Learning Objectives:

Not all substrates are the same—know your stone

There are many staining and soiling mechanisms; they all behave differently

Chemicals do not work alone—there are several factors that impact cleaning

With so many cleaners on the market, where do you start?

Water repellents vs. water proofers; Know the differences

Knowledge + planning + testing=avoidance of façade cleaning catastrophes

Great (and Horrible) Masonry Design Practice

Presented by Donald Harvey, P.E. of

Atkinson-Noland & Associates (ANA)

October 24, 2017 from 11:45am to 1:00pm

At JVA Engineering

1319 Spruce St # 100

Boulder, CO 80302

Lunch will be provided!

This presentation will touch on some of the most common detailing and design snags in modern masonry and provide guidance on how to design masonry structures that are durable, beautiful, and constructible. The presentation will also highlight a few very recent changes to masonry codes and standards that could have a significant (positive) impact on your design.

Mr. Donald Harvey, P.E. is Associate Vice President at Atkinson-Noland & Associates in Boulder, Colorado, a consulting engineering firm specializing in evaluation and repair of masonry structures. Mr. Harvey received a Bachelor of Science Degree from the University of Texas at Austin in Architectural Engineering and Master of Science Degree in Civil Engineering. He has authored several papers relating to nondestructive evaluation of structures, masonry material testing, and evaluation methods for existing buildings, and he serves on several ASTM committees related to masonry.
